The travelling exhibition 'Essen und Trinken' in the REM Reiss-Engelhorn-Museen in Mannheim (DE) consists of two sections: 'Erlebnisreise durch den Körper' and 'Erlebnisreise durch die Zeit'.

The 'Erlebnisreise durch den Körper' zooms in on the path that food and drink take in the human body. The 'Erlebnisreise durch die Zeit' is about the cultural history of food and drink. Through interactive stations, archaeological finds, anatomical models and cultural-historical testimonies, visitors are guided through the exhibition in an educational manner.

Essen und Trinken is a travelling exhibition through Germany.

Bruns was responsible for the development, production and installation of the entire exhibition. The exhibition was created in collaboration with design agency NorthernLight and the REM museum.

Important for the development and realisation was the application of a modular system. A system that is easy to dismantle, easy to build and adaptable to different spaces. As a result, the exhibition can be set up and taken down at various location in Germany.

The exhibition is rich in sensory stimulating exhibits. The section on food and the human body is designed in a colourful 'tunnel', which you enter through the mouth. Each colour, represents a different organ the visitor is in. For each organ, there are educational games such as puzzles, a feeling wall, a crawling snake and cracking a code.

The second section about the cultural history of food, consists of a room with eight self-contained pieces of furniture. As visitor, you will discover the European eat- and drink cultures from the Palaeolithic through various eras into the future. The future part shows a wide range of food ideas for tomorrow.
